Death Penalty Still Permitted, Says Martin

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Attorney General said today that the U.S. Supreme court has not held the death penalty unconstitutional in Texas, "but has declared Texas procedure in the assessment of death unconstitutional."

The opinion was asked by the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles in seeking clarification of the high court ruling last June 29. The 5-4 decision outlawing the death penalty as it generally has been applied was made in cases appealed from Texas and Georgia. Both states have asked a rehearing on the decision.

State Taking Over Food Stamp Program

County Judge Kenneth Douglas announced Monday he has received notice from the Department of Public Welfare that the State will take over operation of the food stamp program.

Judge Douglas said the release from the Department of Public Welfare said the first project will begin Oct. 1 in Nueces County. The State will take control of the program in Hidalgo County next, beginning on Dec. 1. Also on Dec. 1, he said, the State will begin implementation of the program in 24 of the other 28 Texas counties. including Navarro County. My March 1, 1973, the entire program throughout the state will be under State direction.

Judge Douglas said one of the purposes of the changes is an effort to do away with the commodity program.

School Bells Are Getting Ready to Ring... Fairfield To Have Brand-New High School

FAIRFIELD — A new principal, new courses and new teachers are usually enough to cause some exciting changes in a school's fall opening. Though all these ingredients are to be found here this year, they are all overshadowed by the opening of a new high school campus on the eastern boundary of town,

Work on the new campus was delayed in its early stages by heavy rains, but Supt. Thomas W. Cameron says he hopes to have the high school students in the new facility by some time in October. Once the new campus is opened, Fairfield will have four separate campuses: the new high school; the junior high, at the old high school building; the intermediate school (grades 4-6) at the junior high's old campus; and the elementary school. Until then, however, the junior high students will occupy one wing at the intermediate school's campus.

L.C. Williamson, formerly a high school social studies teacher, is the first principal of the newly organized Fairfield Intermediate School. He will be joined at new positions by 12 teachers new to the system, nine of whom have already been selected:

What's That Again?

More than a proposal now, the new Fairfield High School building is growing quickly toward its October opening. Though the school's new
